Something is happening in Australian art today. We are witnessing the resurgence of ideas that took root centuries ago – a return to passion in art; a return to atmosphere and awe.

Historians called it Romanticism; a disposition for melancholic yearning, for communion with nature, for the sublime. Australian artists, in countless numbers, are engaging with these themes again today.

Through the work of thirty-six contemporary practitioners, Simon Gregg seeks to understand a paradigm shift that is shaping the future course of Australian art.

New Romantics is a book for lovers of art, atmosphere and awe. It is a defining work on the return to beauty in Australian art.
