MURCIA MEDITERRANEAN WALKWAY

09/19/2023 - MURCIA (EUROPA PRESS). The representation of theatrical and nostalgic garments, arranged and illuminated from within large masses of water , using water as a means of flotation and illusionistic display. This is what the Australian artist Meg Cowell shows in the Murcia Pasarela Mediterránea open-air exhibition titled Nocturne , which is located in the Plaza de Europa .

will be displayed from external exhibition stands in the Plaza de Europa.

The work is Cowell creates and shares the sensation that the garments are inhabited, both by their "absence" and by a set of moods and emotions. Cowell's images connect the viewer to the real and imagined rites of female transition, and to the creative realm of dream and fantasy.

The artist is inspired by period costumes and the hidden meanings that are often associated with the condition of women, their life experiences and the way they hide; Ideas of mortality, youth and decadence also arise.

Fashion goes much further in this representation, where the garments in the photographs acquire an importance and meaning of study and analysis. An original exhibition of great intensity that closes the 2023 actions of Murcia Pasarela Mediterránea, and that values the expression of the garments from an atypical prism.

The artist's work is currently held in Australian and international collections, including the City of Prospect Art Collection, Arts SA and Western Sydney University.

"One of the main objectives that we have from the new Government team of the Murcia City Council is to promote talent, give new cultural references to the people of Murcia so that they can enjoy the best art and the best culture in our municipality, this being a fundamental pillar for development as a society," said the Councilor for Culture and Identity, Diego Avilés.
